

In your group, discuss the question you have been given and write down your answer on a piece of paper. If you have time, choose from questions 9,10 or 11.

1	Why might there be a difference between how fast a relationship progresses socially and how fast it progresses sexually?
2	What differences could there be between what a boy might want and what a girl might want from a relationship?
3	How often in a relationship are both partners happy at the way the relationship is progressing? How would it show?
4	What problems might there be if one person tries to push the relationship along faster than the other one wants? What could someone do to prevent it?
5	How might a person feel about themselves and the relationship if they end up going too far or too fast before they are ready?
6	People often describe relationships with labels like 'going out' or 'serious'. Can you suggest 4 more labels to cover all the physical and social moves?
7	Some people have relationships with members of the same sex as themselves, which of the answers to these questions would apply equally to same sex relationships? Why?
8	Were there any moves which might have been both social and sexual? Make a list of them. Suggest a situation and a move that might cause confusion.
9	How long might it take for a couple who meet as teenagers to progress through the full sequence of social moves?
10	How long might it take for a couple who meet as teenagers to progress through the full sequence of sexual moves?
11	Are there any physical moves on the cards that only one person in a relationship would do?
